Rebecca Thornton

Jaguar Land Rover

Dear Rebecca,

I am writing to apply for the Internal Auditor position at Jaguar Land Rover. I am an ACA-qualified auditor with five years at KPMG Birmingham, where I have led audit fieldwork on engagements with fees up to £500,000 and managed teams of up to six across manufacturing, retail, and real estate clients.

My experience maps closely to what JLR would need from an internal audit function. I have signed off on revenue recognition, inventory valuation, and IFRS 16 lease accounting across every engagement I have led. For a £320 million industrial property REIT, I established the entire audit approach from scratch. Risk assessment, materiality, and sampling methodology, and delivered on time despite the complexity of a Year 1 engagement. I also redesigned the inventory audit approach for a manufacturing client with £45 million in stock across three warehouse locations, introducing stratified sampling that improved high-value item coverage by 40% while cutting testing time by two days per site.

Moving into internal audit at a manufacturer of JLR's scale is a deliberate career choice. I want to apply the technical rigour I have built in external audit to an environment where I can help shape controls and processes from the inside, rather than reviewing them once a year. I passed all 15 ACA exams first time and hold KPMG's Data Analytics for Audit certificate.

Sincerely,

Nathan Cooke
